

"Are we there yet?"

On aimless rides with my parents, the occasional accident of finding local tomatoes or corn. It's into the language at present from television, and kids ape the whine from the commercial; real parents get clubbed, therefore,

by the dreaded double whine.

All allusions from TV transforming the ordinary to pseudowit render life unbearable.